Black Lives Matter:

Review of a selection of Socio-legal Journals Conducted by the Centre for Socio-Legal Studies, Oxford

Staff and students at the Centre for Socio-Legal Studies were saddened and upset by the tragic circumstances in which George Floyd died and the persistent structural inequality and embedded racist attitudes that it once again revealed. Regrettably, such racism is not confined to the United States and we are aware of the importance of us all taking responsibility for confronting the part that we, and the institution we work for, have played in facilitating discrimination and benefiting from a legacy of imperialism. We would like to take this opportunity to re-assert our commitment to confronting racism through education, research, discussion, and peaceful protest.

Interrogating the interface between the rhetoric of formal rights and the lived reality of legal process is the heart of everything we do but we encourage you to read about our work, share your thoughts, and challenge us. Resources for lecturer and students

In the hope that it will be of value to colleagues within the socio-legal community the Oxford Centre for Socio-Legal Studies (CSLS) has recently undertaken a review of six major sociolegal journals from 2005-2020. The goal of the exercise was to identify socio-legal scholarship that touches upon issues of ethnicity, discrimination, race, colour, intersectionality, colonialism, diversity and critical race theory. This is intended as a resource for lecturers, researchers and students. The journals are: Journal of Law and Society; Journal of Social and Legal Studies; Law and Society Review; International Journal of Law in Context; Journal of Empirical Legal Studies; and Law and Social Inquiry

Our thanks go to Ivo Gruev for his help in compiling this resource.

If you would like to contribute to this resource please contact Linda Mulcahy, the Director of CSLS.
